About the Compilers

Roger & Nancy Verboncoeur

Roger & Nancy (Potter) Verboncoeur graduated from high school together in 1958.

Roger took a position as a student trainee at the Naval Underwater Ordanance Station, Newport, RI and Nancy went on to graduate from the Rhode Island Hospital School of Nursing in 1961. They were married in September 1961.

Roger took a position as an apprentice electronic mechanic at the Overhaul & Repair Department, Naval Air Station, Quonset Point, RI in 1961 and became a journeyman mechanic in 1965. He transferred to a computer programming position at the Supply Department in 1966, where he developed computer software in the accounting field.

Naval Air Station Quonset Point was closed by the Navy in 1974 and the office that employed Roger was moved to Naval Air Station Jacksonville, FL. During this period he was promoted to a Supervisory Computer Specialist position with responsibility for designing, developing, programming, testing, installation, and maintenance of a Budget Formulation and Execution Monitoring System. He supervised a team of eight programmers in this effort. The software was used by various commands in the Department of Defense. Roger retired after a 40 year career as a civilian employee of the U.S. Navy in January 1998.

During this time Roger & Nancy were blessed with eleven children (7 boys and 4 girls).

Their interest in genealogy began in 1989 when they purchased a computer program for organizing their family tree. Since then it has become an addiction to find as much information as possible about their ancestors. One curious thing that was discovered is that Roger & Nancy are fourth cousins.

It was also discovered that not all Vadeboncoeurs are related. There having been some 60 soldiers that adopted the “dit Vadeboncoeur” name as a “nom-de-guerre” in the 1670 – 1770 time period. This necessitated researching all of them in order to build family relationships.

Roger is descended of Jean Chabrier dit Vadeboncoeur on his paternal side and Paul Miraben dit Vadeboncoeur on his maternal side. Nancy is descended of many of the founding fathers of the State of Rhode Island on her paternal side and French-Canadians and a British Home Child on her maternal side. Both trace their ancestry back to the notable greats of Europe such as Charlemagne and back to the Pharohs of Egypt in 1600 B.C.

The research continues and they invite all related families to assist in extending the family tree.

Henry Number from Chabrier = #1715371

Henry Number from Miraben = #13381151

Forward

The Vadeboncoeur name is not found in France as a family name, but rather, was "adopted" by soldiers in the French Army in the 1670 to 1770 era. It was an Army requirement that each man in a Company was to have a distinct name so as to avoid confusion when a name was called. Thus was born the "dit" name. Some men were able to retain their own surname (eg. Roche dit Roche), others adopted the name of their village or area of residence (eg. Roche dit Laforest), and for those that had a hard time deciding, the Army maintained a list of acceptable names (eg. Vadeboncoeur or Francoeur, etc.). As it turns out, Vadeboncoeur became one of the most popular "nom-de-guerre" in the Army. We have identified over 60 soldiers that used the "dit Vadeboncoeur" name. Only a handful of them retained the Vadeboncoeur name after the end of the Seven Years War, the remainder reverting to their original surname.

The literal translation of "Vadeboncoeur" is "go with a good heart." The idiomatic translation of the name from French to English is "GO WITH GREAT COURAGE."

We have been attempting to document all the major events in the lives of the ancestors and descendants of Jean Chabrier dit Vadeboncoeur. Events for which we have a copy of the primary record in our files are noted with an asterisk (*) in front of the date for that event. If you can provide additional documentation for this large family we would be grateful.

If you have done any research on the Vadeboncoeur Families you have probably found a number of different spellings for the name. This is enough to give anyone an Identity Crisis! Below is a list of names that we have found in the course of doing research.

Throughout this document you will notice entries for "Henry No." The number of characters in the Henry number denotes the number of generations down from the ancestor soldier to that person. Eg. A Henry number of 1 2 6 5 B 2 1 1 is an 8th generation descendant. That person's sibling would be 1 2 6 5 B 2 1 2. The more the two Henry numbers match, the closer the relationship. You can determine your relationship to any other person in the report as follows:

Write your Henry No. 1 2 6 5 B 2 1 1
Write the other person's 1 2 6 7 3 1 6
Find the common ancestor----------^
Siblings----------^
First Cousins----------^
Second Cousins----------^
Third Cousins----------^
Once Removed----------^ (No corresponding generation)

These two people are Third Cousins Once Removed

The Henry number also describes your lineage down from the ancestor. In the above example (from right to left) you are the first child of the first child of the second child of the 11th child (siblings greater than 9 use letters) of the fifth child of the sixth child of the second child of the ancestor soldier.

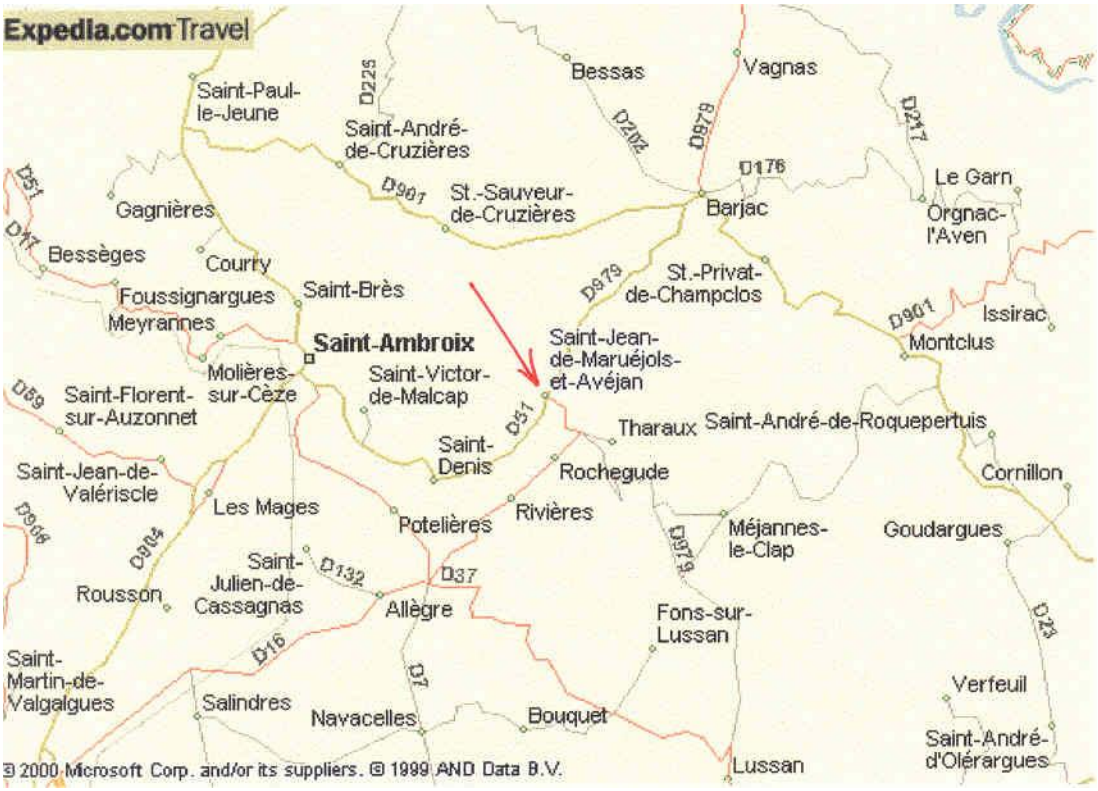
There is a lot of information packed into a Henry Number!

Background

Jean Chabrier dit Vadeboncoeur was born in the small village of St Jean-de-Maruejols in the Languedoc region of France which is north west of Marseille on the Mediterrranean Sea. The Chabrier name translates to “Goat Herder” from the ancient Occidental language of southern France.

Originally the Chabrier family held to the Protestant Religion, but King Louis XIV in the Edict of 1685 abolished the Protestant Religion and declared that all subjects would become Catholics. And so the “New Catholics” were baptized and married in the Catholic Church, but were buried as Protestants because that was for life eternal.

St Jean-de-Maruejols can be located in the center of the map.



The following pages contain pictures of the village to give you a flavor of the area. Our thanks to Robert Vade Bon Coeur for sharing these photos with us.

THE LIFE HISTORY OF

MR. A. D. VERBONCOEUR
BY
Mrs. W. J. LeFebvre
(Sarah Blanche Verboncoeur)

My father, Mr. Adelphis David Verboncoeur, was born August 7, 1844 at Three Rivers near St. Charles, Quebec Provinces. His father's name was Mr. Xavier Verboncoeur Deschabrillier, who was born in France of a Belgium-French father and a Spanish mother.

Xavier and his two sons were cabinet makers by trade. The family at one time lived in Brittany, France; how long and when is not known. The two sons were asked to serve as guards under Napoleon but refused, so the family left the shores of France just before the French Revolution and crossed the English Channel to England. The two young men married girls of English and Scotch parents while in England and later sailed for America by way of north-east to Canada in search of land that Canada was giving away for farming. It was during this period that Adelphis D. Verboncoeur was born in Three Rivers near St. Charles, Quebec Province. It is not known how long they stayed in Canada, but after looking over the farmland offered, they apparently decided against farming there and returned to the United States. One brother settled in Chicago about 1852 with his family. Adela Luppen, the wife of Xavier Verboncoeur Deschabrillier, Jr., died in 1851 when Adelphis David Verboncoeur, my father born of this marriage, was seven years old. Xavier Jr., Adelphis and the other children born of the marriage, came to St. Paul Village, Minnesota Territory in 1852. Adelphis was the youngest of a family of twelve children and was eight years old when he arrived with his father, brothers, and sisters in St. Paul Village. The name Deschabrillier Verboncoeur was too long to sign on business papers, so it was dropped because of business reasons. The Belgium name Verboncoeur was kept as the last name.

From the time Adelphis was fourteen, he worked on farms around what is now known as Minneapolis, Anoka and Osseo. He worked from sun up to sun down for his board, room and washing, plus twenty-five cents a month, which he gave to his father who had remarried and who used the money to help support his family. Adelphis at one time worked for a man who later became his father-in-law and my grandfather on my mother's side, namely Isaac LaBissioneire. Adelphis and John Irland worked for Isaac at the same time. John Irland later went to France, studied to be a priest, and became Bishop John Irland. Adelphis volunteered for the Army in 1862 during the Civil War at the age of eighteen. Since he did not know how to use a gun, he was made barn boss of the Michigan Copper Mines in Northern Michigan on the South shores of Lake Superior near Ispenning, Marquette, and Michiganme, which are now cities. After two years in the Michigan copper mines, Adelphis came back to Minnesota Territory and St. Paul Village. He married Julia LaBissoniere September 23, 1864, the daughter of the man he had once worked for, Julia was fifteen years old and Adelphis was twenty.

Julia was born on her father's farm at Lake Como, St. Paul, Minnesota Territory, on January 26, 1849. She was baptized by Father Augustine Ravoux in the little log chapel that St. Paul was named after. Her father was one of eight young men who helped build that little log cabin in 1841. He was eighteen at the time and was later married in that same chapel by Father Ravoux. Lake Como, site of the farm home and Julia's childhood, was known as Mud Lake because of it's mud bottom.

Adelphis and Julia were married at the Falls of St. Anthony and left for Michigan with nine other newly married young couples. The trip was made on foot with oxen and cart. They walked from the falls to the old East Superior and St. Louis Bay and camped out at night. The trip was enjoyed by all in the unsettled, wild regions that early fall in 1864. They arrived at the old canal about 2 PM one day and all boarded the boat late in the afternoon of a beautiful day in October. The next day they found themselves in the middle of Lake Superior and were surprised that they could not see the shore on either side. The trip ended in a storm just outside Marquett, Michigan, about two miles off shore. All the stock were put overboard and all got to shore except one long horned cow that swam toward the middle of the lake and was lost. The small boats for the passengers were manned by the ship's crew and would wait until the big waves got up level with the ship's rail. Then the people were loaded into the small boats and taken ashore. My father and mother (Adelphis and Julia) said that when they got into that small boat, they thought they would never see daylight on land again.

Adelphis lived in different small towns in Michigan, which are now mostly large cities. Adelphis and Julia's two oldest daughters were born in Michigan; Julia in 1867 and Annie in 1869. The family later returned to St. Paul and bought a home on Carrol Avenue.
Adelphis went to work for Temple and Beauprie, a wholesale house, acting as part-time buyer of butter, cheese, and eggs which he got from nearby farms. From there he went to work for J. B. Hosey and Jager, a fruit wholesale house. His duties were similar to those at Temple and Beauprie, but he had more buying power and took orders for fruit in season. Five more children were born to Adelphis and Julia in St. Paul; three boys and two girls. One girl died in St. Paul in 1877 and one boy died later in Argyle.

The family moved to Argyle Minnesota in the summer of 1870. Argyle was then called Louisa and later named Middle River. It was named Argyle by Scotch settlers. Argyle was then the end of the St. Paul Pacific Railroad, later called the St. Paul Minneapolis Manitoba Railroad, which is now the Great Northern. The railroad in those days consisted of one coach and a boxcar or two and there was no regular time as to when trains arrived or left any given point.

Adelphis and his family arrived at Argyle and got off the train at the point near where the depot now stands. No depot or platform existed in those days, just an earth bank, ditch, and mud. All of the household goods were dumped off and rolled down the embankment and the family had to jump, slide, and roll down the same embankment when they got off the train. My father managed to help my mother and the two younger children down, and during all of this it seemed to them that every mosquito in the land was present to welcome them with bites. There was not a house to be seen-nothing but a lot of tall grass and no trees. Adelphis put a tent up for the family to sleep in and during the day they lived out of doors. When the family got up I the morning, they found all sizes of snakes and field mice under their mattresses. Outside were black crows. They did not like snakes and my mother did not like the wind and tall grass being blown by the wind. It reminded her of the waves on the lake trip. Neither did she like the black bread or burnt barley, which they had to use for coffee. When the family washing was done and hung outside, they had to watch for the wild pigs, for the pigs would try to eat the clothes off the clothesline. There were no roads, but in time a platform was built by the tracks. My father built a log shack for his store on the other side of the rough platform, which was on the west side of the track. Toward the late summer he built his home, a plain frame house one mile east of Argyle on the northwest quarter, section 14, in Middle River Township. The family moved in and settled down to more normal living conditions.

Mr. Joseph Rollette, called Joe for short, came to Argyle a few days before Adelphis had built his log house. Joe was a driver on the Red River Ox Cart for Norman Kitsen, the fur man for St. Paul. Joe was also credited in helping save St. Paul as the Capitol of the state. There were three French families who came to Argyle shortly after Adelphis arrived, who built their homes at the north end of Argyle. It is not known what their names were or where they were from.

The next building to be constructed by Adelphis was what we called the granery. It was across form what is now Argyle's main street and road by the depot near the back of where the big store was later erected. It was used for storing machinery and grain. The log shack was then moved to the back of the granery for a storeroom. The big store was built in 1884, the year Sarah Verboncoeur (nicknamed Blanche) was born. A sign was put up over the front main doorway with "Adelphis Verboncoeur-1884" printed on it, and Adelphis was in business.

I, Sarah Verboncoeur, and Adolph A. Verboncoeur, were born on our father's farm. My sister, Lillian, was born at the back of the big store in the living quarters arranged there. This was in May of 1885, the year of the big hailstorm. People were knocked out by hailstones and cattle were killed in the fields. Windows were broken and crops damaged. The people said they heard the storm coming for three days.

From the living quarters in the big store, the family moved to Mr. John Strauster's home, east of the railroad tracks and bridge. They stayed there during the fall of 1888 while the house in town was being built. The house was built at the north end of town, west of the tracks and main road. It had nine rooms and a large barn and woodshed. There was a large pond north of the house.

Adelphis sold the house to Mr. John Gouler in April 1892. (It burned down in 1954). The family then moved to West Superior Wisconsin. This was April 29, 1892, when my brother Adolph, was twelve, Lillian was seven, and I was eight years old. Adolph managed an employment office in Superior until November 1892. He then moved his family back to St. Paul and worked for J.B. Hoxey and Jager as a traveling salesman until 1910, when he went into business for himself, selling fruits and vegetables at a stand.

The family grew up and left home one by one and by October 1912, Julia and Adelphis were once again alone. They moved to Duluth where their son, Henry and family lived, and Mrs. Verboncoeur went into business of selling wood. I married Mr. Wilbert J. LeFebvre September 27, 1911 and left home. (Henry and I are the only two remaining members of eleven children of Adelphis and Julia). September 23, 1914, Mr. and Mrs. Adelphis D. Verboncoeur celebrated their Golden Wedding Anniversary in Duluth. In the fall of 1915, Adelphis and Julia went to Argyle for the holidays and spent the winter. They lived at the home of their oldest daughter, Mr. Fred Labine. In the late part of January, Adelphis became ill and died March 1916 at Argyle at the farm home of Mr. And Mrs. Fred LaBine. Funeral services were held at Argyle and Osseo, Minnesota, where he and his wife are buried. Julia died November 3, 1931 at the age of 82. She was survived by the following:

Julia (Mrs. Fred LaBine)-Argyle, Minnesota
Annie (Mrs. J.O. Forest)-Winnipeg, Canada
Mary (Mrs. Oliver LeTourneau)--Tofield, Canada
John Verboncoeur-Sunnyvale, California
Henry Verboncoeur-Minneapolis, Minnesota
Adolph A. Verboncoeur-Minneapolis, Minnesota
Sarah (Mrs. W.J. LeFebvre)-St. Paul, Minnesota
Lillian A. Verboncoeur-Minneapolis, Minnesota

2 great -grandchildren

Julia (1884), Annie (1886), Mary (1886), and John (1896), all married in Argyle, Minnesota, at the respective dates. John married Lydia Morin of Argyle, Joseph Morin's daughter. (*= Respective marriage dates)

While Adelphis was living in Argyle, he donated three lots for the first Catholic Church of Argyle and it's parish house, and gave forty acres west of town for a cemetery. When the town moved the cemetery Southeast the tracks, the forty acres were used for the new Catholic Church, school, and parish house as it stands today. The old Catholic Church burned down immediately after Mrs. Joseph Morin's funeral service while she was being buried at the new cemetery. The old parish house was later sold and the three lots were given back to Adelphis.

I know most of the people of Argyle by name from hearing my people mention their names. I know a few personally, although I feel as if I know all of them well. I recall that there were three families of Morins. There were three Morin brothers-Joseph, Andrew, and Elzear. Joseph had six boys and six girls. All three families came from Canada.

Listed below are more people and names I remember. Most of them I remember and recognize when we meet at church, business place or at my home.

LIFE HISTORY OF

MRS. ADELPHIS DAVID VERBONCOEUR

By
Mrs. W. J. LeFebvre
(Sarah Blanche Verboncoeur)

My mother, Mrs. Adelphis David Verboncoeur's maiden name was Julia LaBissioniere. She was 5'9" and weighed 165 pounds, more or less on the heavy side. She was born January 26, 1849, on her father's farm at Lake Como, St. Paul, Minnesota. The farm was located at the west end half of the lake beginning where Chatsworth Street now runs into the Lake, back to West Snelling Avenue and north to Larpenteur Avenue. The farm home stood on a small hill west of where the water fountain stands on the road going to the grand bandstand. This small hill was then a part of Lake Como Shore. It was quite a large lake and heavily wooded with large oak trees and many turtles. The year 1849 was the year Minnesota became the Minnesota Territory also. Lake Como was then known as Mud Lake.

Julia, my mother, had almost black hair, large brown eyes, and a clear fair complexion, even when she got old. She was very religious, active in church work, and strict with her children. She knew all of the fairy tales in French, having learned them from her father, and also knew many Latin words. She could whistle well and imitate birdcalls and songs. As a young woman, she was inclined to be sickly, but from age 50 to 86, she was in good health and was able to do all of her own housework. After my father died, she worked for others by taking care of sick women. She worked off and on up to 83 years of age.

My mother had one-month schooling in St. Paul. Most of her schoolmates were sixteen to twenty years old and could not speak English. She taught herself to read and speak English after she was married. She had a green thumb with house plants, as well as the outside vegetable garden. Julia was fond of animals and was able to train them for tricks. She trained the dogs and cats to wipe their feet before they came in the house. At the age of 86 she looked more like she was 50. In her 80's, she did all of her own shopping, went to church, and went to visit all of her old friends by herself.

The day she died she went to 7 AM Mass and came home with an old friend, who she had taken out for breakfast and went shopping with. After she left her she met another old friend and they had dinner together downtown Minneapolis. Then my mother went to North Minneapolis by streetcar to see a friend from Argyle, Minnesota. She was living with my sister, Lillian, the baby of the family, number 11. My mother got home in time to make supper, and after supper, she and Lillian sat down to read. At 11 PM, Lillian got ready for bed and at 12 midnight, my mother told Lillian to call the Doctor, the Priest, and my cousin, Olive, for she was dieing. My mother walked up and down the living room for about twenty minutes and then lay down on the cot and died, just as the Doctor, Priest, and my cousin Olive came in.

In the winter of 1888, Mr. Olson and Mr. Holm suffered the loss of their store, which burned down in one of Argyle's worst blizzards. The snow was up to the roof tops of many homes. Green and blue bottles of chemicals were used to try to put out the fire. Snow was shoveled between the burning store and the building next to it in an effort to keep the fire from spreading. The fire happened just before Christmas and all the Christmas goods which had been ordered and stocked in the store were lost. Mr. Olson an Mr. Holm rented one of my father's grocery stores until a new store could be built. Our family saw the flames and my father, brother John, and the hired man went to the fire to help.

My mother told me of another bad snow storm June 16, 1887. Everybody with animals to take care of was kept busy getting them all rounded up and into shelter. Ernest Joseph LeFebvre, my husbands younger brother, was born June 16, 1887, the day of the snow storm.

My sister Lillian and I started school in Argyle. Lotte Olson welcomed us on our first day at school. Miss Blank was our teacher and a man was the principal. In the winter during bad weather, Mr. Alfred Belish would stop by our house with his sleigh and my brother, sister and I would join his children for a ride to school.

I also remember our big dog Rover, a St. Bernard, and Rover's mother, beauty, who belonged to Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Forest. Adolph, my brother, would hitch them both to a toboggan in the winter and give Lillian, my sister, and I a ride on nice days. Adolph would stand on the back end of the toboggan and the dogs would make good time on the country roads. We had a nice Morgan horse for the cutter and on a lovely winter day the ride was enjoyable.

These two wonderful St. Bernard dogs saved my brother, Adolph from drowning in the Middle River, old Mill Pond, one cold winter day in 1888. Adolphe, age eight, went skating on the river east of the railroad tracks and took the two dogs along. The old mill was a block or so from the tracks. Adolphe went too close to the mill pond and fell under the thin ice. The two dogs ran up to the road and barked at a man who was going toward the tracks to get some help. The man paid no attention to them, so the dogs kept running back and forth from the river bank to the road. They barked at another man, but he went right on also. The third man who came along followed the dogs to the river, thinking something was wrong. The man followed them and found they wanted help to drag a long branch that was laying on the ground, to a hole in the ice. The man picked it up and took it to the pond, but still didn't know what all the confusion was about. The two men who passed up the barking dogs previously came back to see what all the confusion was, too. They got the branch in the ice hole under the ice. As they held onto the branch and pulled it up, out came Adolph covered with ice. They took him home, put dry clothes on him and called a doctor. As a result of this incident he got Red Fever. When he was pretty well again, he found he had a running ear, which often kept him out of school because of the bad odor it had.

When Adolph was thirty years old, he fell off of a flat railroad car when he was on his way home from work in Seattle, Washington. He broke his spine and wasn't able to walk without crutches, but still could earn his own living.

When Adolph was 35 years old, a doctor at the University of Minnesota found that Adolph had a mascord, which he had taken care of. He died in 1940 at 60 years of age.

In the summer months in Argyle, there were a lot of black crows. Mr. James J. Griffen, the depot agent and dispatcher, shot a lot of them. In the winter, they would trap and kill snow birds for pot pies. I would not eat any of these pies and did not like them.

During the World War I eight of our boys were in the Armed Services, but all came home in good health. They were:

Private Jean Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur

Private Jean Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur is no more famous than any other young man enrolled in the regiments that were part of the French expeditionary force sent to New France in 1755. He is among those who contributed to the defence of the colony and decided to remain in Canada after the defeat instead of returning to France.

Jean Chabrier was born in Saint-Jean-de-Maruéjols, in Languedoc, May 16, 1734. This small village of a few hundred inhabitants is located at the foot of the Cévennes mountains (Southern of France), a few miles east of Saint-Ambroix. Jean belonged to a family of weavers, carders and workers in the wool industry. His father, Jean Chabrier, a weaver, married Jeanne Dubois in 1723. The Chabriers, a protestant family, had eight children and Jean was the fifth child.

It is not known exactly when he joined the Army. We know that for many poor families such a career for one of their sons was a relief, because there was one less mouth to feed. However, it was a painful experience, because there was no guarantee that he would come back alive. Leaving the village was certainly a hard moment to pass for both parents and son.

Jean Chabrier bears a nickname: Vadeboncoeur. It was very common, in those years, to give a nickname to a soldier. It served two purposes. First, it was an easy way to differentiate individuals bearing the same family name within the unit. Second, it was a way to accept this individual in his new family, the regiment, under a new name. This procedure was common for centuries in the French tradesmen guilds like the Compagnonnage. Almost the same criteria were used to determine a nickname. It could be the place, the town or the province of origin of the soldier like "Lacombe" (from a dale), "Parisien" (from Paris), or "Le Breton" (from Brittany) or "Lyonnais" (from Lyon); it could be a flower like "Larose", "Laviolette" ou "Lafleur"; or it could be a reference to the personality of the individual, like "Tranchemontagne" (mountain slayer), "Prêt-à-boire" (a heavy drinker), "Lafranchise" (for his frankness) or "Vadeboncoeur" (go with good heart).

Private Vadeboncoeur had turned 21 when his regiment, the Regiment de Languedoc, was called for service in New France. France and England had engaged in a war that was to last seven years. The conflict had started some two years earlier in North America in the Ohio valley and the region south of Lake Champlain. The French Minister of the Navy and the Colonies, responsible for the defence of the colony with a body of colonial troops, namely the Compagnies franches de la Marine, requested fresh troops from the Minister of War. The Marquis de Montcalm replaced, as commander of the Army, the Baron Dieskau who lost a battle South of Lake Champlain and was made prisoner by the English at the end of 1755. Montcalm, with a greater authority, brought with him fresh troops; among those was the Regiment of Languedoc.

The Regiment of Languedoc was formed in 1671. At this time, the King decided to create a true Royal Army. Usually, new regiments created for the King's service took the name of the region or province where they originated. After the Seven Years War, almost one hundred years after its creation, the regiment would be numbered 67th Infantry. The distinct elements of the uniforms that served to identify the regiment were a six-buttoned vertical pockets on a greyish white jerkin with a blue collar, three buttoned blue cuffs, blue facings, brass buttons, a blue vest and trousers, false-gold braided black felt tricorned hat a with a black cocade.

Jean Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur took part in all of the New France Campaign and was present everywhere his regiment fought. He was hospitalized during the spring of 1758 at Quebec Hôtel-Dieu. We do not know the nature of the sickness, or wound, but he was cared for by the Augustines for at least one month.

The Canadian colony did not have enough military infrastructure to hold all of its troops, except for Quebec city, where "new Barracks" had recently been inaugurated, Louisbourg and Nouvelle-Orléans. Everywhere else, soldiers were quartered with the population who was reimbursed for this duty in the form of a quartering bill. The situation became more critical during winter when military expeditions were minimal. It is most probably during the winter of 1758-1759 that Jean Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur met Angélique Sicard, daughter of Jean Sicard, Seigneur of Carufel and Captain of the Militia, and Marie-Angélique Baron called Lupien. Angélique was two years older than he. The Sicard Family, originally from Castres in Languedoc (Southern of France), were the Seigneurs of Carufel for at least two generations; the fief was located near Maskinongé on the North Shore of the Saint-Lawrence River, west of Trois-Rivières.

September 1759. The future of the French colony was hopeless. Québec had fallen and General Montcalm had been mortally wounded during the battle. The French troops tried to regain their strength while in their winter quarters. Jean and Angélique consorted with each other seriously during the winter. Jean signed a promise of marriage before a notary during the fall of 1759.

Jean Charbrier called Vadeboncoeur fought at the battle of Sainte-Foy in May 1760, but retreated with the entire French Army to Montreal during the summer. On September 8, 1760, Montreal and the entire colony capitulated to the English. On September 15, one week later, Jean Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur, already discharged from the army, married his beloved bride in the small church of Maskinongé.

Almost one month and a half later, on October 22, the first son of Jean and Angélique Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur was born. He also bore the name of his father and grandfather: Jean. This birth marks the beginning of the Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur lineage in North America. By the middle of 19th century, the family name Chabrier was replaced by Vadeboncoeur.

The descendants of Jean Chabrier called Vadeboncoeur travelled in all directions and they can be found in the province of Quebec and elsewhere in Canada, but also in the United States. For some of them, the original name was modified over the years due to spelling errors, phonetic interpretations and translations by parish priests, census officials as well as registration officers. From Vadeboncoeur, it was transformed into: Bunker, Devadboncoeur, Devadeboncoeur, Devadeboncour, Goodheart, Hart, Vaboncoeur, Vadboncoeur, Vadboncouer, Vadbunker, Vade Bon Coeur, Vade Bon Couer, Vade Boncoeur, Vade Boncouer, Vadebonceur, Vadeboncheur, Vadeboncoeure, Vadeboncouer, Vadeboncour, Valbonceur, Valboncoeur, Valdeboncoeur, Valleboncoeur, Vanboncoeur, Varboncoeur, Varboncouer, Varbounker, Vasdebonceur, Vasdeboncoeur, Vatboncoeur, Vatdeboncoeur, Vedeboncoeur, Verbonceur, Verboncoeu, Verboncoeur, Verboncouer, Verboncoeurt, Verboncour, and Verbunker.

152174378. Hugh III of Burgundy, b. 1148,[88] title in Duke of Burgundy,[88] d. 1192.[88] The rule of Hugh III marked the ending of a period of relative peace in the duchy of Burgundy. Hugh was a belligerent man and soon was involved in conflicts against king Louis VII of France over their borders. When Philip Augustus succeeded Louis in 1180, Hugh seized the opportunity and forced several men to change alliance to Burgundy. Philip II was not happy with the loss of his vassals and invaded the duchy, besieging Châtillon. The town fell and with it, its garrison, commanded by Eudes, Hugh's heir. A peace was negotiated and Hugh had to pay a high ransom for his son and give up ambitions over French territory.

Hugh then turned his energies to the Holy Land, embarking in the Third Crusade in the retinue of Philip II. He was the most trusted ally of Richard, the Lionheart and fought with him against Saladin. When Philip returned to France, he left Hugh in charge of the French troops. Hugh played a major role in the victory of the battle of Arsuf (September 7, 1191) and the conquest of Acre, where he died in the following year.

In 1187, Hugh transferred the capital of Burgundy to Dijon, and endeavoured to turn the city into a major commercial centre.[88] He married (1) Alice of Lorraine, married 1165,[88] divorced 1183.[88] He married (2) Beatrice of Albon, married 1883,[88] b. 1161,[88] title in Countess of Albon & Dauphine of Viennois,[88] d. 1228.[88]

155826563368. Bernard I of Lombardy, b. ca 0797 in Vermandois, Normandy, France,[209] title 0810 - 0818 in King of Italy,[209,88] d. 17 Apr 0818 in Milan, Italy,[209] buried in Milan, Italy.[169] Bernard was the illegitimate son of King Pepin of Italy, the second legitimate son of the Emperor Charlemagne. In 810, Pepin died from an illness contracted at a siege of Venice; although Bernard was illegitimate, Charlemagne allowed him to inherit Italy. Bernard married Cunigunda of Laon in 813. They had one son, Pepin, Count of Vermandois.

Prior to 817, Bernard was a trusted agent of his grandfather, and of his uncle. His rights in Italy were respected, and he was used as an intermediary to manage events in his sphere of influence - for example, when in 815 Louis the Pious received reports that some Roman nobles had conspired to murder Pope Leo III, and that he had responded by butchering the ringleaders, Bernard was sent to investigate the matter.

A change came in 817, when Louis the Pious drew up an Ordinatio Imperii, detailing the future of the Frankish Empire. Under this, the bulk of the Frankish territory went to Louis' eldest son, Lothair; Bernard received no further territory, and although his Kingship of Italy was confirmed, he would be a vassal of Lothair. This was, it was later alleged, the work of the Empress, Ermengarde, who wished Bernard to be displaced in favour of her own sons. Resenting Louis' actions, Bernard began plotting with a group of magnates: Eggideo, Reginhard, and Reginhar, the last being the grandson of a Thuringian rebel against Charlemagne, Hardrad. Anshelm, Bishop of Milan and Theodulf, Bishop of Orléans, were also accused of being involved: there is no evidence either to support or contradict this in the case of Theodulf, whilst the case for Anshelm is murkier.[1][2]

Bernard's main complaint was the notion of his being a vassal of Lothair. In practical terms, his actual position had not been altered at all by the terms of the decree, and he could safely have continued to rule under such a system. Nonetheless, "partly true" reports came to Louis the Pious that his nephew was planning to set up an 'unlawful' - i.e. independent - regime in Italy.[1]

Louis the Pious reacted swiftly to the plot, marching south to Chalon. Bernard and his associates were taken by surprise; Bernard travelled to Chalon in an attempt to negotiate terms, but he and the ringleaders were forced to surrender to him. Louis had them taken to Aix-la-Chapelle, where they were tried and condemned to death. Louis 'mercifully' commuted their sentences to blinding, which would neutralise Bernard as a threat without actually killing him; however, the process of blinding (carried out by means of pressing a red-hot stiletto to the eyeballs) proved so traumatic that Bernard died in agony two days after the procedure was carried out. At the same time, Louis also had his half-brothers Drogo, Hugh and Theoderic tonsured and confined to monasteries, to prevent other Carolingian off-shoots challenging the main line. He also treated those guilty or suspected of conspiring with Bernard treated harshly: Theodulf of Orleans was gaoled, and died soon afterwards; the lay conspirators were blinded, the clerics deposed and imprisoned; all lost lands and honours. 19945800092418. Arnoldus, title 0601 - 0611 in Bishop of Metz.[344] Arnoald

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Arnoald, also called Arnoldus or Arnual (ca 560 – ca 611), was a Bishop of Metz between 601 and 609 or 611, the successor of Agilulf, and a Margrave of Schelde. He was the son of Ansbertus, a Senator, and wife Blithilde.

Married before 584 to Oda (?), born ca 564. Scholars looking to replace the traditions that would make Arnulf of Metz the son of Arnould have proposed alternative relationships between Arnoald and the Carolingians. Proposed solutions would make him father of one of the following:

Saint Itta, married to Pippin of Landen

Dode or Doda, who became a nun in 612 at Treves becoming called also Clothilde of Treves, born ca 584, married ca 596 to Arnulf of Metz

Father of St. Arnulf of Metz

It is a subject of much debate among genealogists whether or not Arnoald is the father of Arnulf bishop of Metz, who, according to Christian Settipani's early publications, is a perfect candidate. Settipani contradicts himself in newer publications, stating that Arnulf of Metz couldn't have been Arnoald's son given to no mention of the former having any royal blood. Further speculation indicate Arnulf's father could be a Bodegisel, based on documents from old Frankish legends. This statement is also uncertain. He states instead that Arnoald was Arnulf's father in law. He married Unknown.

Aeneas of Latium, emigrated 1177 BC in King of Latium.[373] # 5614 - Aeneas

"Aeneas was the brother-in-law of Paris and Helen of Troy, and it is said that when Troy was taken, Aeneas with a band of his fellow citizens, defended bravely their part of the City, till the Greeks gave them leave to depart in safety with as much of their goods as each could carry. Accordingly, all of them carried off gold and silver and other precious things portable; except Aeneas, who only carried off his own father, Anchises, upon his shoulders. Upon which, the wondering Greeks generously allowed him to carry off likewise what goods he pleased. But Aeneas only chose his household goods, which made the Greeks' admiration still more, and they gave him leave to go with his Trojans to what place he pleased.

"After the destruction of Troy, Aeneas came into Italy and after many valiant exploits, he was given Lavinia, daughter of Latinus, King of Latium, as his second wife. He built a city calling it Lavinium, in honor of his Queen, and caused his subjects to be called Latines in honor of his father-in-law, whom he succeeded as King of Latium."
